Patriotic Songs:

Legacy of the Flag Continues

Patriotic songs are musical equivalents of a country's motto and aspirations. In the words of Joel Barlow (1754-1812), an American revolutionary war song writer, 'One good song is worth a dozen addresses and proclamations.' Patriotic songs are audible symbols, just as the tricolour flag or the three-faced lion of the Asoka pillar is India's visible national symbol. Many patriotic songs composed at different times and in different Indian languages have references to the flag. Such songs emphasised patriotic sentiments and helped in uniting the people in their common hopes and aspirations.

The stirring 'Thayin manikodi pareer' (Behold our Mother's great banner) written by Subramania Bharathiyar (1882-1921) was very popular amongst Tamil-speaking people in India.

*Kambathin keelnitral kaneer - engum
Kanarum veerer perunthiru kuttam
Nambar kuriyarav veerer - thangal
Nalluyi ranthunk kodiya inai kapper
Thayin manikodi pareer!*

(Behold our Mother's great banner!
Under the flag-mast are patriots.
Loyal and faithful
Ready to sacrifice their very life

Special postmark, dated 17 December 1982, issued from Anna Road Head Post office, Chennai, to mark the valedictory day of the birth centenary celebrations of the poet Bharathiyar.

To keep the flag flying high.
Behold our Mother's great banner!

'Jhanda ooncha rabe Hamara' (May our flag always fly high) penned by Shyam Lal Gupt 'Parshad' aroused more patriotic fervour than any other battle cry. The soul-stirring song was first sung on 13 April 1924, at Phoolbag, Kanpur, in remembrance of the Jallianwala Bagh massacre of 1919.

*Vijayi bishwa tiranga pyara
Jhanda ooncha rabe hamara...*

(World-conquering tricolour dear to us,
May our flag always fly high)

FDC commemorating Shyam Lal Gupt. The postmark features the national flag.

In 1923, Gulab Singh Lodhi was shot dead by the police while unfurling the Swaraj flag at Lucknow's Aminudulla park. The park was renamed Jhandewala Park after the incident. Jhandewala means 'standard bearer.' The park became the epicentre of political activities in the city of Lucknow. There is a memorial of the 'Jhanda Gaan' (song of the flag):

Paying 'Homage to Martyrs' on the occasion of the 25th anniversary of Independence.

*Jhanda ooncha rahe hamara ...
Sada shakti barsane wala ...
Iski shan na jane paaye ...*

(May our flag always fly high...
Constant source
of undying strength...
May its glory never fade...)

A patriotic matchbox label depicts the Purna Swaraj flag with the caption:

On one side of the matchbox appears a picture of Subhas Chandra Bose and the pledge to give complete support to the leader.

*Hamara azadi ka jhanda
Iski izzat hame janse zyada pyari hai.*

The Purna Swaraj flag and patriotic motto inscribed on the other side of the same matchbox depicted in illustration 4.

(The flag of our freedom Its honour is dearer to us than our lives.)

Subhas Chandra Bose made it his declared intention to raise the 'flag of freedom' atop Delhi's Red Fort. His slogans of 'Jai Hind' (Victory to India) and 'Chalo Dilli' (Onward to Delhi) have been immortalised in many post-independence Indian postage stamps.

*Sabse ooncha bai duniame
Jhanda hamara
Netaji zindabad...
Azad karenge, azad kerenge
Chalo bahai Dilli cholo
Jhanda laberake chalo ....*

(Our flag flies the highest in the whole world Netaji zindabad...
We will take our freedom,
we will take our freedom
Comrades to Dilli March with the flag)

'Jai Hind' and 'Chalo Dilli' inscribed on the stamp in Hindi.

The songs of the Indian National Army (INA) captured the hope harboured in every Indian mind-that the 'flag of freedom' will soon be hoisted in Delhi's Red Fort, ushering in India's independence.

Our national Flag's Legacy

*Tomor pataka jare dao
Tare dao bahibare sakati*

(Give strength to the bearer of your flag)
- Rabindranath Tagore

The Children's Day stamp of 1962 carries the theme of the year as conveyed by the International Union for Child Welfare, Geneva: 'The rights of every child; the responsibility of every adult and community.'

Let us repeat together with folded hands the words inscribed in the Flag Code of India, 2002, for the edification of school children, 'I pledge allegiance to the National Flag and to the Sovereign Socialist Secular Democratic Republic for which it stands.'

The development of the historic consciousness of the youth of the contry depends upon an understanding of the imperatives and the deeply-felt beliefs that informed the creation of the national flag. A concerted attempt will have to be made to educate the generations to come if they are to see the history, the cherished principles and the significance of its very appearance when they see their national flag.

Sekhar Chakrabarti is an internationally famed senior philatelist and postal history collector. Born in 1946, he began collecting stamps in the early 1960s when "Thematic Philately" as a discipline was in its fancy in India. His other passion is Vexillology, which he has clubbed in to his philatelic collections. His collection "Flags on Stamps" have been highly appreciated and brought laurels to the country from several international stamp exhibitions held under the auspices of Federation Internationale de Philatelie (FIP). His name found a place in the Limca Book of Records for his collections of most stamps issued from foreign countries featuring the Indian national flag. He has curated philatelic exhibitions on Rabindranath Tagore in Kolkata and Cairo (Egypt) organized by the Indian Council for Cultural Relations. He has also served as a jury member at several philatelic exhibitions organized by the Dept. of Posts and other philatelic organizations. He is at present a retired engineer and lives in Kolkata.
